Meet our leadership: To the surprise of many, the "Staff/Leadership" page is one of the most highly visited pages on most church websites. Why? In my experience, most potential new visitors are very interested in the leadership of a prospective church.

The "Can't-Miss-Quote" Technique: Most staff/leadership pages on church websites will offer a brief description/bio for the members on their team. But we like to take it a step further with something called the "Can't-Miss-Quote" technique. On first look, it seems simple - and it is - but it's also incredibly powerful. Here's how it works: instead of including just a bio for each staff member, also include a brief quote directly from them. By doing this, you'll shift the perspective on the staff page of your website from a third-person description (bio) to a first-person conversation (can't-miss-quote). This simple little trick will drastically increase the level of personality on your staff page as well as make it more personal overall.
